rominent Nerve Specialist Says Cof-fee Drinking Has Produced a New Disease Chronic Caffeinism.

"There is a distinct type of cases," esps Dr. Wm. M. Lesrynsky, consulting neurologist to the Manhettan Eye and Ear Hospital, "frequent among the poorer class of people, but by no means confined to them, of tenetional nervous disorder (caused by coffee drinking), to which the elastic term 'neurasthenia' or 'chronic caffeinism' in its broadest significance may be aptly applied." In cases of neurasthenia, inquire into coffee drinking," adds Dr. Otto Juettner. "I have seen hundreds of victims of this disease," continues Dr. Lessynsky "among commercial travelers, brokers, merchants, actors, writers, and men con-

Convicted criminals are conducting courts in the guise of Judge and jury on their own everyday cases. I sat there for nearly three hours yesterday listening to the most remarkable proceedings ever heard behind bars of a penal institution.

The poignant impression that I derived from the whole proceedings was Postum has a flavor resembling Old the everlasting effort on the part of Java, but is entirely free from caffeine these prisoners to honestly arrive at stitute "we" for "I"—to impress the great need of "our" rights as a body against "my" rights as a personnity. In a word, I can say without going into the sherits of the Oahorne synthem that, at least, no school for making citizens can possibly have such a clearing house of healthy reasoning and solving the problems of citizenship in self-government as was evidenced here in the cases I heard.

"If the Executive Board has the power to dismiss this clerk over the judiciary which had the right to appoint its own clerks, they could at will elect or reject any one without due process of law, and we would get a condition of 'boss rule,' which must be eliminated at all cost if the Mutual Welfare League is to be the democratic organization we are aiming at.

"The Executive Board should have no such power. The President may appoint a Justice to the Supreme Court of the United States, but he cannot remove him without just cause in impeachment proceedings.

Board or anybody, to gain any advantage.

The Warden upheld this opinion in a speech the same as any fair Judge would issue from a bench.

"The Warden takes no part in the politics of these bodies," he said. "I am a believer in two parties pretty well balanced, provided both parties are working for the good of the entire organization and not for any personal reasons."

Another case had come up from the Judiciary Committee of the Mutual Welfare League to the supreme court, which is composed of the Warden, the principal keeper and the prison physician series.

The case was this; Mr. R—— (everybody is treated with deference and docorum, just as lawyer and Judge decorum, just as lawyer and Judge and jury treat you in a court room) Mr. R.—, who was a delegate from his company (a company meaning a department of work), had been "loaned" to another company, and had served there for nine weeks.

The decision of the judiciary court, carefully worded, was made against the defendant on the grounds that he could not properly represent his company while working for another company while working for another com-

They arrived at this conclusion from this section of their constitu-tion: "In the event of a vacancy on the Executive Board through resig-nation, transfer or discharge or other nation, transfer or discharge or other cause, such vacancy shall be filled at the next meeting of the Board of Delegates."

Mr. R.— had a member of his company to represent his case in the guise of a lawyer, and the other side had their advocates.

Members of the Executive Board and the judiciary were present to discuss the constitutional point in question, and many an attorney below Brooklyn Bridge might well have profited could be have heard these arguments.

The Warden decided since the question had been raised that Mr. R— had been deprived of any rights, even if Mr. R— waived those rights, the supreme court would refer the matter back to the judiciary.

Brooklyn Bridge might well have profited could he have heard these arguments.

Every conceivable angle was thoroughly thrashed out in the most direct, courteous and unimpassioned manner. Many times the Warden's face was a study; having heard one excellent argument on a point, another immediately came afterward to meet it, so that it resolved itself into a very fine question of reason.

When it seemed that the judiclary world likely be upheld one man made the point that Mr. R— had not been present at the decision of the judiclary and therefore it was a "star chamber" decision. Mr. R— was asked about this by the Warden, and stated that while he was not summoned to the judiclary court proceedings he realized that he was not on trial, but that it was a constitutional question as to whether he was entitled to represent his company where he drew his pay, and at the same time be working as a "loan" to another company, and said he would waive his rights, and asked that the question be now settled.

STRENGTHENING THE LEAGUE'S

STRENGTHENING THE LEAGUE'S CONSTITUTION.

CONSTITUTION.

Somebody explained that that would create a precedent and other star chamber hearings might be held as a consequence.

"We do not question the integrity of Mr. R—," argued this man: "what we are trying to do here is to establish this constitution on such a fair basis that it will not only stand us in good stead but will build strong for the future Mutual Weifare League.

"We want to get away from any rule here or star chamber proceedings. Besides." he continued, "three members of the Judiclary Committee belong to this man's company.

"Thus likey are acting as Judge and jury at one and the same time, which no outside court would permit. If I jury I would not have come here," he concluded.

"You certainly don't mean that if jury I would not have come bere," he concluded.

"You certainly don't mean that if you had been your own Judge and jury you would not have been honest enough to send yourself up here?" asked the Warden reproachfully.
"I would not," answered the man with a smile.
